

Saints mark 150 years in British Isles

By PAM OLSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The growth of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Britain and the contributions of its converts will be discussed in a BYU symposium, "The Church in the British Isles, 1837-1987," Friday and Saturday at the Conference Center.

Four general authorities — President Gordon B. Hinckley, Elder Derek A. Cuthbert, Elder Marion D. Hanks, and Bishop Robert D. Hales — will be addressing the symposium audiences.

Elder Cuthbert is the only living general authority who was born in Great Britain, said V. Ben Bloxham, associate professor of history.

"This is the time to recognize their (the British church members) contribution," said Bloxham. He pointed out that all 13 of the church's presidents trace their lineages to the British Isles.

The LDS population in England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland has now grown to 140,000, according to Bloxham, who received his doctorate at the University of Southampton in England.

Joseph Smith directed Heber C. Kimball and six other elders to preach the LDS gospel in England. The seven missionaries anchored at Liverpool on July 19, 1837, according to Larry C. Porter, professor of religion.

The success of that and succeeding British missions injected much-needed support into the church, which was suffering from financial problems and apostatizing members.

The first English converts were baptized on the eighth day after the missionaries' arrival in Preston, Lancashire, about 30 miles from Liverpool, according to "A Century of Mormonism in Great Britain," by Richard L. Evans.

Elder Joseph Fielding's brother, the Rev. James Fielding of Preston, let the missionaries preach in Vauxhall Chapel several times during their first week there.

Evans said that when the Rev. Fielding discovered that some of his congregation were interested in joining the Mormons, he closed the chapel to the elders and consistently opposed them from that time forward.

The nine baptisms took place as planned, however, continued Evans.

The membership growth during the 1837 mission was gradual, said Donald Q. Cannon, associate dean of religious education.

He added that the "big numbers of converts" were gained mostly during the next mission in 1839-40, known as "the mission of the Twelve," because members of the church's Council of Twelve proselyted at that time.

British converts began immigrating to join the saints in America as early as 1840, when Brigham Young arranged for the first immigrant ship, said Cannon.

Immigration increased through the 1860s and continued until about the turn of the century strengthening the church in Nauvoo and later in Salt Lake Valley, said Cannon.

One of the reasons the British people were so receptive to the gospel in the 1840s, said Cannon, is that the country was undergoing a "tremendous amount of industrialization."

The people's roots were pulled up during this change and they were "looking for security and answers to questions."

By the mid-1900s, the British LDS members, as well as those in other countries, were discouraged from moving to America in order to build the church throughout the world, said Cannon.

The history of the LDS Church in the British Isles is the subject of an upcoming book, "Truth Will Prevail." Eleven writers, most of them BYU researchers, collaborated to write it.

Reagan challenged Fights to regain credibility and control

By FRANCIE L. BALL
Senior Reporter

President Reagan faces several challenges this week as he embarks on his final two years in office, just a month short of his 76th birthday.

Reagan and his administration have been reeling recently from problems caused by the revelation of covert arms sales to Iran. To make matters worse, it was also revealed that profits from these sales were diverted illegally to Contra rebels in Nicaragua, but the President claims having no knowledge of this.

Repercussions have been swift and hard with the resignations of several top aides being announced. Nine separate councils, committees and panels have been set up to investigate all or part of the scandal and Reagan's popularity fell among voters, especially in the last month of 1986.

To make matters more complicated, Reagan will also be bumping heads with a new Democratic-controlled Senate beginning this week.

"I don't think it will be that big of a change. He's had to deal with the Democratic majority in the House before. I don't think it will stymie anything. He'll just have to be careful knowing he has to deal with a Democratic majority in the Senate too," said Stanley A. Taylor, BYU professor of political science.

Congress may be controlled by the Democrats, but that doesn't necessarily mean that they will dominate, said David B. Magleby, BYU associate professor of political science and congressional fellow. "There is a conservative coalition of southern states made up of both Democrats and Republicans that could dominate Congress," he said. Reagan could do well to work with them, he said.

The President has already submitted his budget proposal to Congress, said Paul Smith, press secretary for Utah Senator Orrin Hatch. "Some of the Democrats are making this a partisan thing. Some are declaring the budget 'dead on arrival,'" he said.

"There is no doubt that the relationship between the Congress and the President is strained. Congress feels betrayed," said Magleby. The administration "self-consciously" violated both the spirit and letter of the laws concerning consulting and notifying Congress about the sales of arms and covert actions.

"This is not a partisan issue. It is a separation of powers issue," he said.

Concerning these laws, Magleby said that Congress will go back to the drawing board. "If there were any loopholes, they will be scrutinized," he said. Committees in both houses of Congress are investigating and trying to make sure that the President won't be able to violate these requirements again.

But neither Taylor nor Magleby feel that there will be any legal repercussions for the President.

"I don't think the scope of this wrong is anything near that of the Watergate era," said Taylor.

Magleby reiterated that there has been no direct evidence linking the president to the illegal activities.

Nonetheless, White House officials feel that Reagan has a long, hard road ahead of him to rebuild a demoralized White House staff, restore the administration's damaged credibility and renew an almost uncanny personal bond with the American people, according to a report in U.S. News and World Report.

Allies on Capitol Hill feel Reagan might accomplish this by making bold new advances on issues such as the trade deficit, the United States' competitive position in world trade, the budget deficit, relations with allies, and Soviet arms negotiations, according to this same report.

"Reagan would like to go down in history as a great president. He has better chances than most. Any significant policies he can get into place — any significant advances he makes can help his image in years to come," said Taylor.

"He has an ability beyond the norm to be believed and to communicate," said Magleby. "He needs to put it (the Iran-Contra issue) behind him. He needs to say, 'I've made a mistake' and go from there. The President needs to find a way to reorient people towards the agenda he would like them to pay attention to, not this one," said Magleby.

By FRANCIE L. BALL
Senior Reporter

President Reagan has been hurt in the popularity polls by the recent Iran-Contra issue, but Utahns still have confidence in him, said Paul Smith, press secretary for Senator Orrin Hatch.

The confidence of Utah voters has not been affected too much by the matter, said Smith. He said inside the Washington, D.C. area, the press has grilled the president, but "Americans, in general, still believe in President Reagan — that he is an honest man trying to do what's right for the country."

Current polls differ, but most, including a private White House poll cited in this week's Newsweek, puts the presidential preference rating at a respectable 55 percent favorable at last count. In December, a New York Times-CBS poll showed a drop of 20 points to 47 percent favorable.

Local political science experts maintain that it is a general trend that the more time a president spends in office, the less popular he becomes.

"The American public tends to be fickle," said Stanley A. Taylor, BYU professor of political science. He said that people will be down on the president one week when he is doing virtually nothing to deserve the decrease and up on him the next. "It is just the cyclical and fickle nature of public opinion," he said.

David B. Magleby, a BYU associate professor of political science and congressional fellow, agrees and believes that the recent scandal has hurt the president.

"Presidential popularity will ebb and flow a bit," he said. "It will not ever be as high as it was during the period right after his reelection or during his first term of office, for that matter. The question is 'Can he intervene to slow the process of growing unpopularity so he can effectively govern?'"

A recent Time magazine poll shows, however, 60 percent of Americans hope their next president will employ different policies from Reagan. The poll showed 41 percent thought "it would be better for the country" if the next president was Democrat, compared with 31 percent for a Republican.

Garbage debate ends; city trucks to be sold

By LINDA RITTENHOUSE

Provo City's commercial sanitation equipment will be sold to Laidlaw, a Canadian based company, for a total of $800,000 despite strong protests by Provo citizens.

Mayor Joseph Jenkins, concerned because the trash pickup service was not able to pay its overhead, made the original proposal that passed Tuesday at the Provo City Council meeting. The vote was 4 to 3 after a lengthy debate.

Concerned citizens filled the council chambers to overflowing as they turned out to voice their opinions against the proposal. BYU students were represented in the citizenry opposing Jenkins' proposal.

"I feel that garbage pickup is a service, not a business," said Margaret Rasmussen, a resident of Y-Mount Terrace. "By selling city equipment and turning us over to commercial haulers you are backing us into a corner. We have no choice. No matter how bad service is, we have to pay or our trash is not picked up."

John Spencer, general manager of the Carriage Cove apartment complex, spoke in support of the present city service. He said, "We have experienced nothing but excellence even with the difficult problems created when students move in and out in the fall and spring. I've had experiences in other communities where this was not the case."

Alvina Crocker, a Provo resident who has an apartment building in Pleasant Grove where Laidlaw is the hauler, testified, "When the city dropped out, our bill went from $19 a month to $35, and the quality of service was unsatisfactory."

Councilman V. Ben Porter's motion to dismiss the mayor's proposal triggered a debate on the issue.

Councilman Merrill Martin said, "The commercial companies will continue to undercut us until we go under. As soon as the city drops out, their prices will go up. There's no question of that. But I don't see how we can continue. We are subsidizing our commercial haul."

Councilman Stan Brown said, "We should not be led into this trap. Many cities such as Atlanta and Scottsdale made the mistake of doing what we are contemplating, and they are now having to go back into the business at a great cost to them."

Councilwoman Anagene Cottrell said, "The quick solution to the problem is to take the easy way out and sell the equipment."

Those voting against the proposal, which authorizes Jenkins to sell the equipment as well as contracts the city has with local businesses, were Cottrell, Brown and Porter. Those in favor were Stephen Clark, Ron Last, Charles A. Henson and Martin.

Brown, when asked about a citizen groups' idea of getting up a petition to take the issue to the voters, said the feasibility of such an action is something that would have to be discussed with an attorney. "The present action does not affect private residents as it now stands, but it opens the door. That's why I was so adamantly opposed to it," added Brown.

Nobel winners subject of talks by 'Y' scientists

By LAURI HOFMANN
Universe Staff Writer

Nobel Prize laureates, honored for their advances in electron microscopy and chemical reactions, were the subjects of Wednesday's two "Flea Market of Ideas" lectures.

In the first lecture John H. Gardner, BYU professor of physics and astronomy, said that scientists are accomplishing things now with the event of the electron microscope that a few years ago they wouldn't have even dreamed about.

Bill Hess, BYU professor of botany and range sciences, and Gardner spoke on Nobel Prize winners Ernst Ruska, Gerd Binnig and Heinrich Rohrer.

Ruska invented the electron microscope, and Binnig and Rohrer invented the scanning tunneling electron microscope. "It's mind boggling what we can do with electron microscopy," said Gardner, "Things we didn't even dream about ten years ago are happening now."

There are two kinds of scanning electron microscopes. The scanning electron and the scanning tunneling microscope, according to Hess, and both are capable of very high resolution. They depend on wave characteristics of matter for their resolution power, as opposed to an ordinary light microscope, which depends on light waves for resolution, he said.

Using an ordinary microscope to research the type of things accomplished with electron microscopes is "analogous to a blind man trying to find out how a fine lady's watch works with a pair of boxing gloves on," Hess said.

BYU has three electron microscopes. One is a scanning electron microscope and the other two are transmission electron microscopes. "BYU is trying to acquire a scanning tunneling microscope, according to Gardner. There are only 60 of these microscopes in existence, and the cost is about $300,000 each."

According to Hess, Ruska's Nobel Prize represents work he started 50 years ago and continued to the present. Yet Binnig and Rohrer used a completely different concept, a technique called tunneling. "Prospects for this technique are very promising," said Hess.

In the second lecture, Steven R. Goates, BYU professor of chemistry, spoke on three other Nobel prize winners who have contributed in the field of chemical reactions.

The three winners are Dudley Herschbach, John Polanyi and Yuan T. Lee, who are recognized for their work in helping peers understand the processes of combustion, catalysis, and interstellar chemistry.

"They are what I call masters of the art of chemistry," said Goates to approximately 50 BYU professors and students.

The main thrust is fundamental. In this area of chemistry, the objective is to understand why the world is the way it is," he said.

Chemical reactions make up the world and everything in it. "There are a lot of things we can control that we could not control before," said Goates, commenting on the winners' research.

"One thing Yuan T. Lee is working on is combustion. The ultimate practical goal is to improve the efficiency of energy usage such as automobile pollution," he said.

"This small band of chemists who took up this work, in the beginning, were perhaps justly regarded as visionary," said Goates.

Marijuana traces found in crewmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both crewmen of the Conrail locomotive that ran a stop signal and slid into the path of a speeding Amtrak passenger train were found to have marijuana in their system at the time of the accident, federal investigators said Wednesday.

One source close to the investigation said the amounts of marijuana on blood and urine samples taken from the two men within hours of the Jan. 4 accident near Baltimore were "a sufficient amount" to indicate possible chronic or recent use of the drug.

It remained uncertain, however, whether the marijuana was sufficient to have affected the performance of the engineer or brakeman at the time of the accident, said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Reports conflict as war escalates

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said it recaptured 14 strategic hills from Iraqi troops in a new offensive northeast of Baghdad on Wednesday, but Iraq said it repulsed the assault and inflicted "immense losses" on the Iranians.

Iran also said it hit the Iraqi capital with a missile for the second straight day, while Iraq said its planes bombed Iranian cities for a fifth day.

Iran's pre-dawn thrust in the central sector of the 730-mile battlefield came five days after an estimated eight divisions of Iran's fanatical Revolutionary Guards pushed into southern Iraq, apparently aiming for the port city of Basra.

Pentagon unveils classified budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is asking Congress for an estimated $25 billion for classified programs, much of it going for radar-evading Stealth weapons and other high-tech projects, an analysis of the proposed fiscal 1988 defense budget shows.

The estimate is based on information provided by Pentagon and congressional officials who spoke on condition of anonymity, along with analyses by the private Center for Defense Information, which often is critical of Reagan administration defense proposals, and the Defense Budget Project, which seeks to inform the public about Pentagon spending.

Their studies show that proposed spending for classified programs is rising, but the rate of increase is dropping in line with smaller increases requested in the public portions of the $312 billion defense budget.

Soviet Union calls head-on session

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, on the eve of a new round of nuclear arms control negotiations with the United States, changed signals Wednesday and called for a face-to-face session between the heads of the two delegations, two U.S. officials said.

The two sides had planned to begin their seventh round of talks in 22 months Thursday in Geneva by having the full delegations meet across the bargaining table.

The U.S. officials, who demanded anonymity, said they did not know what was behind the Soviet request. Yuli Vorontsov, first deputy foreign minister, was named last week to head the Soviet delegation. The meeting would give him a chance to become better acquainted with Max M. Kampelman, who remains in charge of the U.S. team.

Utahns polled

Education is big issue

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah residents believe education is the most important issue facing the state today, followed by taxes and state budget deficits, according to a new poll.

The poll, conducted by telephone Jan. 5 and 6, has an error margin of plus or minus 4 percent.

Gov. Norm Bangerter has asked lawmakers to increase the state's personal income tax by $102 million. The governor also wants six other taxes raised a total of $104 million. Much of that money would also go to education, but a 5-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax increase would help maintain deteriorating roads.

Red M&Ms on comeback due to customer demand

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Red M&Ms, banished 11 years ago because of misplaced concern over food dyes, are once again taking their rightful place among the tan, brown, yellow, orange and green.

The return of the red candies that melt in your mouth but not in your hand was prompted by a national outcry that included thousands of letters to the manufacturer and the formation of college campus societies, a spokesman for the Hackettstown-based M&M-Mars said Wednesday.

About 20 percent of the 100 million

M&Ms made each day will be red, the company said.

The attachment is purely emotional because M&Ms of all hues taste alike.

"It's great fun and it's part of America," said M&Ms spokesman Hans Fiuczynski. "That's our best explanation" for the popularity of red M&Ms, he said.

The company has received letters from World War II veterans who remembered red M&Ms in GI rations and from people who learned how to count in grammar school with the candies, he said.

Yugoslavian dancer teaches new footwork BYU International Folk Dance Ensemble

CLARK HIRSCHI
Universe Staff Writer

The International Folk Dance Ensemble began the semester with several tiring hours of rehearsal under the direction of a professional dancer from Yugoslavia. Janko Jergan, 31, arrived at BYU January 8 to begin his duties, and by Saturday the performing arts company had earned and filmed an entire suite of dances from the region of Croatia in Yugoslavia. "I like to get material directly from the people we feel are experts," said Ed Austin, artistic director of the International Folk Dance Ensemble. "We have no one here who can learn and specialize in all the international styles. When these instructors come, they bring more than dances. They bring background, costumes, and a feel for these countries and their dances," explained Austin. "I said the guests bring an excitement and enthusiasm that rejuvenates the group." The folk dancers usually have a guest come each year to teach a new suite of international dances to the company. Jergan has been dancing in Yugoslavia since he was 10, and began his professional career at age 18, when he joined Lado, one of the country's most acclaimed professional folk ensembles. He has studied theater, classical dance, and modern dance extensively, and was an instructor in the Lado group. Jergan explained in his broken English that he prefers to learn the other forms of dance. "I like to sing and dance," he said, "and members of the professional folk ensembles must be able to do both. I think there is also more feeling in folk."

Jergan married an American girl who he met while dancing with Lado. Two months ago they moved to the United States. Since that time Jergan has been traveling to various folk ensembles throughout the United States and Canada to choreograph and teach. From here he is on his way to work with a professional company in Montreal.

Jergan praised BYU's folk dancers and the entire dance department as one of the best in the nation. "The people here have a feeling for the dance," said Jergan. "Their technique is good."

Jergan also complimented the entire BYU community, as friendly, clean, happy, and sincere. "I never met so many nice people in my life," he said.

Jergan spoke English considerably well for his two months in the United States. Prior to his move here he had studied English very little.

Austin said he felt it was a very positive experience for both the dancers and the instructor, and that Jergan left very impressed with what he found here.

The suite may be presented at the "World of Dance" performance in September, said Austin. "This, however, depends on when we can have the costumes ready."

Parts for the costumes will be hand embroidered by people of Slavic descent living in the Pittsburgh area or by people actually living in Yugoslavia, he said.

The music for the suite will be recorded live by the Tambouritzens, another acclaimed international folk ensemble and orchestra based at Duquesne University, in Pittsburgh.

Film Festival shuttle planned

For this year's U.S. Film Festival, students will be able to use a special campus/Park City shuttle van as well as get University credit for attending the event.

The festival will be held in Park City and run from Jan. 16 to Jan. 25. Tickets for the events are no longer sold at the BYU Theater Box Office but can now be obtained in Salt Lake and Park City. For more information call 328-3465.

The van will leave from the north side of the Harris Fine Arts Center on mornings at 8 a.m. and will leave Provo most evenings at 9 p.m. Jan. 17 until Jan. 25. The only exception will be on Jan. 19 when the van will leave at 9 a.m. and leave Park City at 10 p.m.

In Provo, seats will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. In Park City, seats will be saved until departure time and then sold. The van, which seats 12, will depart Park City for a location that will be pre-arranged with the driver.

Individual seats cost $1 each way. For further information contact Paul Nibley at 378-4269.

Credit is also available for those who attend a prescribed number of events and write a paper.

Students may get one credit for attending seven films and four seminars and writing a three-to-seven-page paper describing and evaluating the experience at the festival. To get two credits a student must attend 15 films and eight seminars and write a seven-to-10-page paper.

The deadline for papers is Feb. 2. Those needing more information about the class (section 6 of THSC 595R, index no. 76760) should contact Dr. Charles Metten in room 359A, HFAC (in the Southern lobby of the Pardoe Drama Theater).

A special festival shuttle is also planned to help film students who have previously signed up to go to a free seminar on "Students in Film: Where do We go from Here?" on Jan. 19. The shuttle will leave BYU at noon and return immediately after the seminar. There will be no special shuttle for the Jan. 22 student seminar on hands-on video editing.

Americans consume more fruit snacks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Americans have an appetite for snack foods. Last year, they spent $600 million just on fruit snacks, a relatively new product category.

According to Del Monte USA, the growing concern with nutrition is affecting the fun foods we eat. For example, dried fruit was mostly used as an ingredient in cooking. Today, with convenient packaging and product variety, dried fruit has become a high quality snack.

OPINION

Reagan's credibility has remained high despite Iran scandal

For the past six years President Reagan has been able to rise above the troubles and traumas his position has given him, and has been able to maintain a high level of credibility among the majority of Americans.

The American people have disregarded nearly every report of Reagan's shortcomings and have essentially viewed Reagan through the proverbial 'rose colored glasses' of acceptance.

UNIVERSE OPINION

Upon beginning his first term in office, Reagan was able to give the U.S. what they were looking for—a respectable public hero. The immediate release of the Iranian hostages, the euphoric excitement of the stock market and the endless barrage of campaign promises which surrounded his election brought about a positive press image in the eyes of the public. This image has presumably stuck with Reagan throughout his term in office and, judging from the public's current opinion and past behavior, it will likely continue throughout the remainder of his term.

At the time of his election, Reagan's "nice guy" image was accepted by Americans not because he is nice but because he was able to answer the emotional needs of quite a few Americans, who were tired of feeling cynical about their leaders and were ready to swallow just about anything.

Despite the Iran scandal Reagan's popularity will most likely continue. The Iran scandal has done little to alter this.

Throughout Reagan's term in office the media has tried unsuccessfully to expose the usual scandals and keep them reverberating until they become stuck in the public mind. However, Reagan has been able to project a sincere, relaxed, fatherlike image that has presumably made him immune from the scourging swords of the media.

The new question is whether or not the Iran scandal has penetrated Reagan's shell of security.

The initial reactions of the public toward President Reagan's secret dealings with Iran indicated a sweeping disapproval. But according to Richard Wirthlin, the president's private pollster, Reagan's approval rating fell after the Iran exposure, but has rebounded above 50 percent.

In the face of a situation that would most likely destroy other political careers, it appears that President Reagan has overcome yet another media scourging without losing the trust and confidence of the majority of informed Americans.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of the Daily Universe, which consists of the editor, the editorial page editor, a student staff member, a teacher of opinion writing and the associate publisher; the opinions expressed are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration, its student body or sponsoring church. The Board meets Thursdays at 1 p.m. in 562 ELWC. The meeting is open to the public.

Universe invites individuals to submit letters and views

The Daily Universe regularly receives student, faculty and staff input for the paper. The newspaper has provided several available areas for student involvement.

On the editorial page, the newspaper welcomes letters to the editor and editorials which fit into the Viewpoint column.

The maximum length for letters is one page with double-spaced typing. If a student feels he has an issue that can't be dealt with on a single page, he should consider submitting to Viewpoint.

Viewpoint submissions need to be limited to two and one-half pages, double-spaced and typed.

The Universe requires author's name, identification and telephone numbers for all submissions to the editorial page.

If the writer has access to the word processing program, WordPerfect, we would appreciate them bringing the disk which we can copy. This saves time and cuts down on error possibility.

Also, we reserve the right to edit submissions for space and clarity.

Most of the clubs on campus want publicity. For this reason, The Universe provides Clubnotes, which runs on Tuesday and Thursday. Most club information belongs in Clubnotes, not as a news story. The notes cannot be longer than 25 words and must be in English.

The Universe will not accept any submissions that sound like a code. Submit information through the ASBYU Organizations Office.

Finally, At-A-Glance is offered by The Daily Universe as a public service to announce noteworthy events and activities.

The paper won't accept information that is commercial in nature or that which results in remuneration to anyone.

Boring night-life

Editor:

Provo must be a pretty boring place for a police officer. I have heard all the jokes about the Provo night-life and they are all true!! I went out to my car at 6 a.m. a few days ago to find a ticket on my car. I thought it was a joke as I was parked in the driveway—or so I thought.

About three feet of my car was off the driveway on the sidewalk. I received a ticket at 5:24 a.m. for "parking on a sidewalk or lawn."

Don't the Provo City Police Officers who are on night patrol have any prowlers to catch, or drug rings to break up? Why get out of the patrol car in almost sub-zero temperatures to put a $3 ticket on my car for having my back tire on the sidewalk? This town never ceases to amaze me!

Are we that great?

Editor:

"America, everyone's trying to get in, but you don't see anyone trying to get out." I hear this comment frequently, and frankly, I find it rather disquieting. Do people really understand its implications? I don't think so.

First of all, "everyone" is not trying to get in to America. Those who live under oppressive, authoritative regimes would probably be thrilled with the prospect of living in the United States. Yet unless these would-be defectors are scientific geniuses, prima ballerinas or top athletes, could our "land of opportunity" live up to their dreams and expectations? Contrary to popular belief, Americans do not have a monopoly on freedom, prosperity and happiness. Try convincing the Swiss goatherder to leave his alpine meadows and become part of our competitive, dress-for-success society. Offer a Swede an American passport in exchange for his political neutrality. Take a Tongan woman away from her unspoiled South Pacific paradise and put her in a condo in Manhattan. Invite the Parisian student to give up his apartment in the heart of the 'Quartier Latin' to come study in the states. The truth of the matter is that most people would probably be no better off in America than they are in their own countries.

"America is the best country on the face of the earth," is another statement I find misleading. Saying that the U.S. is the best is saying that it is better than all other nations. Better or worse implies making a moral judgment, and few questions are of a moral nature.

Things are seldom better or worse, merely different, and the ability to accept or adapt to different is a true test of character. I encourage anyone who thinks that America is best to save his money and some extensive travelling. By this, I don't mean the 14-day whirlwind see-Europe-through-the-bus window tour. I mean study abroad, live with a foreign family, mingle with the natives, actually become part of the culture. I lived and studied in Belgium for a year and have never before had such an eye-opening experience.

Finally, to those of you who are still reading this, I think that it is important to make a few clarifications. I am not a member of the Communist Party. I do not hate America. I believe in free enterprise. I pledge allegiance to the flag and am thankful for the opportunity to live in a country where I am free to pursue my goals, worship the religion of my choice and express my opinions. I have been given citizenship awards by the Daughters of the American Revolution and by the American Legion, and I am just as patriotic as the next person. I am proud to be an American.

Patriotism is a good thing, and I encourage you all to be patriotic. But do let your patriotism obscure your open-mindedness. In the intricate web of global interdependency, understanding and appreciation of other cultures is vital to our existence.

Fans and teams being cheated by ticket distribution

Viewpoints:

Submitted by Kevin Reeve

A devoted BYU fan and ASBYU athletics Vice President of 1982-83. He is currently working for Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

For the past eight years I have studied student ticket distribution for basketball and football in detail. Every year it seems to get worse. It has been sad to witness this decline. It has hurt the teams and the fans. From my somewhat unique perspective as having been an extremely devoted fan, I easily spent more time studying while waiting in line for tickets than anywhere else, once spending 54 straight hours in line waiting for tickets to see BYU kick Utah's rear, and as a Studentbody Officer privy to the inner workings of these decisions, and who tried in vain to create a policy that was good for the fans, I would like to forward an idea whose time may have come.

The recent systems have been designed for three reasons, none of them for the fan. First, they are easy to administer. Scott Williams deals with you on one day, then puts the money in the bank. They are also designed to be a "fair" distribution of a limited resource (but any Econ major will tell you that this "fair" approach is more socialistic than capitalistic.) Finally, implicit in these systems is a way of controlling spontaneity. Predictability is very important to the administration. Sitting at a club or group of friends could be seen as dangerously unpredictable.

As nice as all this is for the Administration, it is terrible for both the fans and the teams as well. Back in the "old days," I witnessed several occasions where a spontaneous and somewhat rabid core of fans ignited the crowd, which in turn ignited the team, and turned the game around. Frank Arnold knew this, and went out of his way to encourage that type of support. Interestingly, the last time it was possible to get first-come first-serve basketball tickets was our last really great season, 1981. But what system is good for the fan? Here is my proposal (originally rejected in 1982 by a University committee established to look at policy).

Football: First, move all of the faculty seating out of the east stands. The east stands now become the student section. On game day, the gates open at 10 a.m. Not all the gates at once, so you have a stampede, but one or two gates, and the students are let in slowly, after having their activity card checked. Because it is important to the administration that student seats generate revenue, a special option can be checked in your registration, an additional fee charged, and you get a special sticker. No card with sticker, no admission to the student section. No paid-up student is turned away. If you want to sit with your girlfriend, great, as long as she has her card. If you want to sit as a frat...er I mean club, great, get together for a tailgate party, then go in together and get a block. If your spouse is a non-student, a special sticker can be purchased by married students only that will allow the holder to bring a member of the opposite sex, no friends (we would have to assume it is the spouse.) By noon, the student section will be mostly filled, and when the team comes out for their pre-game warm-up, Coach Edwards' heart will warm to the cheer.

The opposing teams will be impressed and hopefully intimidated by the pre-game support. By kick-off, everyone on the east side is "up" and ready to cheer. The cheerleader with the P.A. system that addresses only the east side can get unified cheers going. A good albeit spontaneous time can be had for all.

But what about the lines? No one can get in line at the gate before 6 a.m. It will give BYU security something to do—you know—job security. But what about the fact that there are fewer seats on the east stands than currently distributed to students? Many of those tickets are currently being sold on the "black market" anyway. Besides as anyone who watched Sigma Epsilon knows, it is easily possible to pack forty people into fifteen seats. Those seat markings must have been designed for people with wide posteriors. Essentially no student gets turned away. Would be fairer than that? Even BYU has to go through this process. No more reserved student seating any student!

Basketball: Essentially basketball could be handled in the same way. Section 23, 24, and 25 and some overflow above concourse become "Student Section." Railings are put to separate the students from pul and our dear "blue coats" monitor separation. On game night, the doors open at 5:30 p.m. for a 7:30 p.m. off, and slowly, students with activity cards and ticket stickers are let in. Pregame warm-ups, a good, loud, spontaneous crowd is there to cheer. Everyone is sitting among friends, whether it be a family home ever group, a ward party, or a dorm fl. They all have a good time, perhaps even a little crazy! As an observer of Duke University, I can tell you the value of crazy fans. Those folks know how to cheer!

Is this system better? It is for the fan. It is for the teams. Not only you have a good time at the game with your friends, but you will meet a lot of new friends. Many of the people I continue to associate with at BYU are people I met in basketball lines. And let me say to the Administration, that in all the lines I was in, and there were many, there were never any drugs, alcohol, or parties. BYU students are generally pretty responsible. We studied in those lines.

So what now? If you like the idea, have a better one, one of you didn't get tickets this year, start a petition. Get enough signatures to a referendum. Although student government leaders are essentially powerless in this area, enough grass support something different.

BYU tennis team whips USU; gears up for USC Friday night

RICKY FRANK
Sports Writer

The BYU's men's tennis team easily defeated the visiting Aggies from Utah State, sweeping all of its singles matches without losing a set. The doubles matches went as well with only giving up one set.

BYU's first string singles player, top-ranked player in the region, Bert Garbell, easily handled his opponent in less than an hour as he defeated Utah State's Todd Jorgenson, 6-0.

Garbell is BYU's hopeful in the Rolex ATP National Indoor Championship that is to be played in Richmond, Va., on Feb. 2. Garbell qualified for the Rolex Championship by winning the Rolex-Region 7 Singles Championship in Provo last November.

Garbell concentrated and didn't look sloppy," said BYU Coach Larry Leach. "The guy he played was good, but Robert didn't give him any daylight."

Garbell looked crisp and very patient against Jorgenson. "I worked on my back and on my ground strokes," said Garbell.

This was a good match for Garbell as he showed his arm which has been bothering him because of a nerve problem. He was supposed to have it operated on before the season started but forfeited the operation so he wouldn't miss out on his senior year.

Hall seemed pleased with the way his team played. "It was good for our new guys to get a match in, particularly when we win," said Hall. "We have played a lot of matches this year, but nothing in a dual match form. All of our players are upbeat. We will probably use the same lineup against USC."

BYU readies itself to host top-ranked USC on Friday evening at 7 p.m. in the indoor tennis courts. The Cougars are looking to do better than last year, losing to the Trojans 9-0.

BYU will be facing a tough USC team that has four of the nations top 25 players on their team.

USC's first singles player, Ricky Leach, a three time All-American who is currently ranked second in the college polls, will be taking on what Hall calls "the new guy on the block," BYU's first singles player Garbell.

Garbell and Leach are from the same part of Southern California. "I'd like to beat him, but he's really good," said Garbell. "I have to play my very best, I'm looking to play good and have fun. As long as I play well I'll be happy."

According to Hall, Garbell has played well this year due to hard work and intensity.

Two unidentified Cougar tennis players use teamwork in an effort to defeat their USU opponents in last night's contest.

Cougar cagers back home; face WAC's cellar teams

The Cougars continue their conference schedule with home games Tuesday and Saturday against the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) teams in the WAC — San Diego State and Hawaii.

The Aztecs and Rainbow Warriors dug themselves deep into the conference hole early in the season — with no wins against three losses at this year.

BYU and Utah play the way they have been lately, and Hawaii is likely to home 0-5 after this weekend.

Following last weekend's road trip to UTEP and New Mexico, BYU and the two teams found themselves in a three-way tie for second place with 3-1 records.

Air Force took over as the unlikely WAC leader as the only undefeated team in the conference by beating the cellar teams — Hawaii and San Diego.

The saga continues for BYU tonight with a 7:30 tipoff against the Aztecs in the Marriott Center.

SDSU is led by sophomore guard Josh Lowery, who as a freshman last year averaged six points per game. That figure was tops among all returning Aztecs.

One of the reasons for San Diego's downfall this year is their inexperience. They lost four starters from last year and don't have any seniors on the team this year. They have an overall record of 2-12.

Hawaii, coached by former BYU basketball coach Frank Arnold, is 5-10 on the season and has a young team. Arnold said that with another good recruiting year, Hawaii could move out of their long-held position of one of the WAC's bottom two teams.

BYU seems to have a different hero every time it plays, and so far nine different players have had the opportunity to start for the Cougars.

In last week's victory over UTEP, freshman guard Nathan Call rose to the occasion when the Miners made a strong bid to overcome a large Cougar lead. Call scored six points in the final 1:15 of the game and stole a pass after an inbounds play to stop the Miners' momentum and possibly secure himself a starting position in this week's games.

Edwards to head grid coaches

The size of football coaching staffs, the reduction of football grants for years and the future of spring practice are all issues LaVell Edwards of BYU may become increasingly involved with as new president of the American Football Coaches Association.

Edwards, who has headed BYU's football program for the past 15 years, was installed last week as the AFCA officer at the organization's national convention in San Diego, Calif.

Although he was just selected to position, Edwards will not begin his duties as president until 1988.

"It's a great honor to head this coaching organization," said Edwards.

Especially at a time when there are so many issues needing our attention. Hopefully, I can be a part in finding solutions to some of our problems."

Edwards, the 64th president of the AFCA, replaces San Francisco State University's Vic Brown.

Other officers to work with Edwards next year are first vice president Joe Restic of Harvard, second vice president Don James of Washington and third vice president John Majors of Tennessee.

"Our organization has been working in behalf of college football for the past 65 years and it's 5,700 members form a diverse group," added Edwards.

Besides presiding at national meetings, Edwards will work closely with Executive Director Charlie McClenon and the 14-member board of trustees in dealing with all facets of college football coaching.

Edwards has been active as an officer in the AFCA for over a decade.

In his tenure as head coach at BYU, Edwards has taken the Cougars to a national championship (1984) and been named national Coach of the Year. His overall record with the Cougars is 137-45-1, and his teams have won 11 Western Athletic Conference championships.

'Y' gets Dixie star

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Fine Unga, a first-team junior college All-American tailback from Dixie College, has signed a letter of intent to play football for BYU next season.

Unga, who is from Provo, rushed for 1,514 yards, caught 26 passes and scored 26 touchdowns in 1986 for 11-1 Dixie, which finished the season ranked third nationally.

He will graduate from Dixie this spring and then transfer to BYU.

The Cougars lose their top three running backs from the 1986 season — Lakei Heimuli, Bruce Hansen and Robert Parker — to graduation. Heimuli became BYU's all-time leading rusher during his tenure with the Cougars.

Unga is one of several Dixie players who have signed letters of intent with four-year schools. Another Dixie first-team All-American, defensive end Leon Cole, has signed a letter of intent with Texas A&M.

Bangerter supports education, science

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gov. Norm Bangerter says that as long as he's Utah's chief executive, the state will continue its commitment to education and basic scientific research.

Speaking Wednesday to the opening session of the three-day American Physical Society Conference, Bangerter told some 380 physicists that Utah ranks 10th in the nation in the number of university patents granted between 1963 and 1983.

Interpreting class offered at UTC

A workshop for interpreters for the deaf is scheduled at Utah Technical College.

It will be held Jan. 17 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in UTC's Administration Building, room 217.

"Interpreters in the Educational Setting" will be the theme of the workshop sponsored by the Utah Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf.

"This workshop can help interpreters in the process of getting certified and those interpreters already certified to upgrade their skills," said Elaine Smiley, UTC Handicapped Services director.

Julie Harris, a Utah certified interpreter, said, "Some interpreters are really good in some areas, but need some improvement in others, so the workshops are helpful."

The workshop is free to the public.

John Wayne returns to his ancestral village in an attempt to quiet his past. But this is about the only quiet aspect of a boisterous, brawling hair-pulling donnybrook of a film! The green hills, the beautiful red-haired, feisty Maureen O'Hara, the Abbey Players, the bellowing, bullying, Victor McLaglen all contribute to this feudian feast.
